Construction Company Charged with OHS Violations

A welder was seriously injured in an explosion while repairing a hole in the top of a cargo tank, which had an explosive atmosphere. The company faces fines of up to $500,000 plus jail for OHS charges including failing to test the tank to ensure that hot work could be performed safely.

[Dan Bailey Oilfield & Road Construction Ltd., Govt. News Release]