Man dies of complications 2 years after Washington Park crash

An Englewood man died from injuries sustained in a crash two years ago in Washington Park on the South Side.

Carlos Jordan, 22, was pronounced dead at 8:30 a.m. Wednesday, according to the Cook County medical examiner’s office.

He was in a vehicle that slammed into a fixed object about 2:55 a.m. Jan. 25, 2018, at 50 W. Garfield Blvd., the medical examiner’s office said.

Autopsy results released Thursday found he died of complications of multiple injuries from the crash and ruled his death an accident, the medical examiner’s office said.

Chicago police could not immediately provide details on the crash.
