

Are LOTO Procedures Always Followed At Your Workplace?

Workers get killed when you take shortcuts with your lockout/tagout procedures.

Is This the Kind of Confined Space Entry You Want for Your Workplace?

A sobering reminder of confined space dangers that you can use to protect your own workers.

Do Your Fire Exits Look Like This?

Padlock fire exits from the outside creates a death trap and gets you into major OSHA trouble.

Is This Any Way to Protect Your Visitors?

Protecting workers isn't always enough to keep a workplace safe.

Is This a Safe Place for a Smoke?

Smoking is suicide; smoking next to flammable liquid is homicide.

Is This Safe Posture for Stacking?

Avoid MSD injuries by fitting tasks to workers, not the other way around.

Is This a Safe Way to Guard a Floor Opening?

The rails designed to keep workers from falling might end up puncturing them to death.

Is This the Right Way to Use a Welding Torch?

Between the knees is not the best place to keep your welding torch—especially when it's lit.

Is This the Right Way to Use a Nail Gun?

The worker committing these nail gun safety infractions is actually not a worker but the Prime Minister of Canada.

How's This for Protective Clothing?

If you work in traffic, reflective clothing is a must—for you AND your dog.

Is This Safe Posture for Keyboard Use?

Show office workers how to avoid repetitive stress injuries.

Is This Any Place to Flush an Eye Injury?

It's dirty; it's dry; it's obstructed; other than that, it's a great eyewash station...

Is This the Right Way to Beat Heat Stress?

Beer and other dehydrating beverages in the heat make workers more, not less vulnerable to heat stroke.

Is This the Kind of PPE Example You Want Your Supervisors to Set?

This supervisor not wearing his PPE on site is a classic case of Do As I Say, Not As I Do

Is This a Safe Way to Use a Scissor Lift?

The mistakes the workers in this photo are making are the kinds of things that lead to scissor lift fatalities

Is This What You'd Call Machine Safety?

Nothing drives home the danger of amputation more than a photo of a worker sticking his head in an unguarded machine.

How's This for Face Protection?

Use this photo to train workers on proper face and eye protection.

Is this a Proper GHS/Hazcom Label?

Use this photo to provide GHS explication and training to your workers.

Is this Proper PPE for Operating a Jackhammer?

Use this photo to warn workers about hand-arm vibration risks and use of PPE.

How's This for Ladder Safety?

While it might be great for the circus, ladder-balancing-on-ladder hijinks is something you never, ever want to see at your job-site.

Is This What You'd Call a Safe Electrical Circuit?

Use this photo to warn workers of the dangers of homemade electrical solutions.

Is This What You Want Your Workers Wearing for Hot Work?

Use this photo to training workers about the importance of using flame resistant and other protective clothing.

Is This a Safe Way to Use a Forklift?

Use this photo to train forklift operators and other workers how NOT to use a forklift.

Is This How You Want Your Workers to Lift Heavy Objects?

Use this picture to show workers how NOT to lift—unless they want a spinal injury.

Do You Really Want Your Workers Breathing This Air?

Use this photo to train your workers about indoor air quality and ventilation.