Picture This! A New Version of Walking the Plank

Not watching where one is walking is a common problem, as workers try to multitask by texting, reading or filling out paperwork while moving from one area of a worksite to another. We get away with it most of the time, until a situation like this one develops. Then all bets are off. It appears that several of these planks are long past their due-for-replacement date. (elcosh images)